Below is a selection of some of the creative artists at Craftboston Holiday 2010 that will make it easy for you to put together the outfit for your next holiday event or for an amazing look every day!

Amy Nguyen's process for making her kimonos and scarves begins with folding or pleating a rectangular piece of white silk. She then stitches and manipulates the fabric as she dyes it to create clothing that has a deep, rich, color and texture.

Mary Hughes and Caro Bosca are classically trained in jewelry making and blacksmithing and are accomplished goldsmiths. Hughes-Bosca hand forge, form and fabricate high karat gold with the finest quality stones and rare materials to create timeless and contemporary jewelry inspired by the architectural constructs of man and nature.

Peggy Russell of IRO Design has been creating beautiful and unusual accessories for the home and body for 19 years. Bold patterns and colorful images are the hallmark of her products that were inspired by 20th century art and fashion ranging from Paul Klee to Emilio Pucci.

Seymour Mondshein and Lisa Martin strive to create work of lasting beauty in designs that are both durable and functional. Every bag they make is from the finest materials available and designed to provide the user with maximum convenience, comfort and style.

Holly Hamilton produces a combination of limited edition and one-of-a-kind jewelry using 18 and 22kt gold and incorporating South Sea pearls, unique stones and carved wood. Her jewelry captures her vision on "modern antiquity" that is meant to be treasured and handed down for generations.

Patricia Palson works on a large scale loom which gives a strong depth of color and pattern in her weave to make unique and stylish clothing. Patricia was chosen for an award of excellence in the Craftboston Spring 2010 show for her unique clothing.
